July 19, 2020 16th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Dear Family of God,

Telling parables is Jesus' way of teaching us new things, a new way of thinking, new attitudes in life; His way. The Parable of wheat and weeds is teaching us the mystery of evil; that God is not the source of evil, it is the enemy. We have a tendency to make a quick judgement now, "pulling out the weeds", but God is teaching us not to pull out the weeds, but wait until the harvest time. First, so that we don't harm the wheat and second so that the weeds (or the bad ones) will be given a chance to repent, be converted and be saved.

Evil cannot thwart God's plan. He allows evil so that something greater may come out of it. Joseph's brothers had an evil plan to sell him into slavery in Egypt, but God's plan was to use him to save his whole family, and the whole nation from famine. The greatest example of this is that Jesus' Crucifixion becomes the source of our salvation. God wants us all to trust in Him and be patient with everyone, then do our part in building His Kingdom on earth.

One thing we owe to one another, is to act in charity toward our neighbor. We all need love. When we love, we are fulfilling our mission to love and help one another to receive grace from God as the fruit of love.

May the Blessed Virgin Mary help us all to be patient and trust in God in everything.

Yours in Christ and Mary Immaculate,

Fr. Jess Ty

David Lins, Director of Faith Formation

My home has a night routine. First, our toddler gets a bath. Then, we ask if she's hungry again. If so, it's "second dinner." (How do people who are so small eat so much?!) Next, it's time to brush teeth. After that, all three of us pray together. Finally, milk and cuddles (which currently entails a few "Frog and Toad" stories).

The best part? The prayer. And while I'd like to think my prayers do an adequate job, and my wife knocks them out of the park, every few nights, Georgiana decides she wants to lead. It blows us away every time.

Here is a recreation: "Uh. Thank you for Mommy. Daddy. Ahmee (Grandma Linda). Thank you for Gramma Sue. Frog. Toad. Big bed. Mot (milk). Thank you for toast..." This goes on for about three more paragraphs. And we let her go. It seems nothing escapes her gratitude. SHE JUST TURNED THREE!

Today's second reading says, "we do not know how to pray as we ought." I wonder if that was written for adults, because my little toddler who still struggles to pronounce the letter "K" absolutely nails prayer.

Nothing escapes her gratitude. She isn't rushed because she is worried she might be going on too long. She doesn't ask for much, because she can't even fathom her needs won't be met. It convicts me every single solitary time.

In this crazy time that will probably end up in history books throughout the world, I think it might be a good time for us all to follow in my little girl's adorable teensy weensy footsteps.

Consider taking out a pen and a some paper—or open a new document on your computer—and challenge yourself to keep writing things you are grateful for until A) You run out of ideas. B) You fall asleep. C) Someone else makes you stop. Do the sign of the cross before you begin and make it a prayer. Don't worry about what you need. Toss your needs into another prayer. Oh! And let me know what this does for you...

Praying with our Children: The Gift of Silence

Silence is a gift; it is an important and necessary means of listening to and responding to God. With this purpose in mind, there is a practice...called the Lesson in Silence. This is the greatest help to the child in becoming aware of and mastering his or her own actions. It is something we can do at home. We need to understand that this is not the kind of silence imposed on the children by an adult trying to restore order to a noisy room. We could say that such silence is "an empty silence" for it is of little value to anyone but the adult. The silence we want to create in the family for prayer is the one...rising from stillness, which has substance and brings to the child and the family an interior order.

It can be done in the following way:

- Invite the child(ren) to find a comfortable position and call to attention your own stillness.
- Invite the child(ren) to try and imitate you.
- As the child(ren) become more able to achieve their own silence, whisper a few brief suggestions to help them become aware of their own bodies. "Is even our breathing quiet?"
- When all are relatively silent, invite an awareness of sounds around you. (birds, traffic, water dripping, etc.) The suggestion might be given to close our eyes and listen for a particular sound that is deliberately made (ringing a bell, snapping fingers).
- As the silence is more complete, a psalm verse might be repeated, or a song might be very quietly sung.
- The exercise may be completed by going just outside the sight of the children and whispering each child's name to come to you. The child who is called gets up and moves as silently as possible to where you are, while the others wait with amazing patience and great anticipation for their names to be called...

Some things to remember to enjoy the Gift of Silence at Home

- Unplug. Try to turn off the TV, the computer, and unplug from all your devices. ...
- Silence is essential for the soul!
- Notice your speaking voice and allow for time to speak to your children in a quiet manner. ... We must model for them how to be silent.
- Invite the children to be still. Young children may not be able to exercise control of movement right away. Make sure he or she has had an opportunity for movement prior to offering this time of quiet and stillness.
- After you have had an opportunity for silence, discuss with the children: What sounds did you hear in the room? What sounds did you hear in nature? In your own body?
- The 6-12 year old children may want to find a place where they can sit in silence, and later write, draw or journal about what they noticed. What gifts of God did they find in the silence? Maybe he or she has a small notebook or can take loose sheets of 8.5 x 11 paper and fold in half to create their own booklet, so that he or she may write or draw about their experience of silence often.

LIVING AS A MISSIONARY DISCIPLE

By Sister Mary Eileen

Can I Make a Difference?

Have you ever planted something and watched it grow?

It's truly amazing how something so small and plain...a tiny seed....can utterly transform into something so magnificent and complex...a plant, a fruit, a vegetable.

If we have eyes to see, nature can teach us something about God and His ways. In fact, Jesus said so:

"The Kingdom of heaven is like a mustard seed that a person took and sowed in a field. It is the smallest of all the seeds, yet when full-grown it is the largest of plants. It becomes a large bush, and the 'birds of the sky come and dwell in its branches.'" Mt 13:31-32

Especially in these trying times, we can feel overwhelmed by the immensity of problems and the sheer volume of things that need fixing in our world. What can be done? How can I change things?

God calls us to focus on two small but critical areas: the present moment, and my part.

They seem small because, by placing our focus here, we seemingly won't effect major changes in the world...or will we?

Read the lives of the saints. They did both great things and small, unnoticeable things, but whichever they did, they did because they wanted to do God's will at each moment. The greatness or smallness of each action didn't matter...the only thing that mattered was that it was what God called them to do. Each one changed the world for good in unique and amazing ways. What was their secret?

Fruitfulness depends on God, rather than our own actions...just like the mustard seed planted in the ground. Whatever we offer to God, if we intend to do His Will, bears abundant fruit for the Kingdom, even if we are unaware exactly how. To believe this is what it means to "walk by faith not by sight" 2 Cor 5:7

Doing God's will in the present moment is like planting the mustard seed in the ground. God's grace is like the rain, the soil, the air, and the sun...all of which mysteriously make the seed grow into something much greater than it was.

God's grace is superabundant, powerful, mysterious, and limitless in its reach. Let's learn to do God's Will simply and trustingly, and leave the increase to His grace.
